The railroad was originally the Kansas City, Mexico and Orient which provided service from Kansas, Oklahoma and Texas to Presidio, destined for the West coast of Mexico. The ATSF (Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe) which operated a line from Galveston to Brownwood and San Angelo Junction, TX, purchased the line in 1928. ATSF sold the line to the South Orient Railroad Company in 1992, who operated the line until it was sold to the State of Texas in 2001. Texas Pacifico Transportation Ltd. (TXPF) then leased the line from the State of Texas also in 2001. TXPF is currently owned by Grupo Mexico who also owns four railroad related companies: Ferromex, Ferrosur, Florida East Coast Railway and Intermodal Mexico. Today, TXPF is benefitting tremendously from its proximity to the Permian Basin shale play. The vast majority of railcars moved by TXPF are directly related to the fracing of oil wells in one of the country's largest reserves.
